

News from the Wyoming Department of Health

Wednesday, May 6, 2009

Department Names Aging Division Administrator

The Wyoming Department of Health announced today that Ginny Mahoney has been named as administrator of the department's Aging Division.

Mahoney will also continue to serve as a member of the department's senior management team as deputy director of rural and public health with oversight duties for the Community and Public Health Division, the Preventive Health and Safety Division, and the Rural and Frontier Health Division. Mahoney has been the department's chief of staff since 2004.

"Ginny has a long and accomplished history of experience working with older adults," said Dr. Brent Sherard, Wyoming Department of Health director and state health officer. "I believe she is the most qualified person to lead the Aging Division into the future."

The Aging Division serves Wyoming's older adults by providing services and financial support for local programs such as meals, caregiver support and housing.

The Aging Division's deputy administrator, Michelle Ammerman, had been serving as interim administrator since the December 2008 retirement of Bev Morrow.

####